Dimeo Construction Company Renovations to Historic Trumbull College Residence Hall at Yale University

New Haven, CT – Dimeo recently completed renovations to the historic Trumbull College residence hall at Yale University. The building, which consists of several interconnected buildings ranging from three to five stories high, was built in 1929 and received a complete interior and exterior restoration. The exterior granite and limestone façade were cleaned and replaced as necessary, new windows and a new slate and membrane roof was installed. The interior of the building was brought up to current ADA standards, with new interior finishes, and a complete modernization of the existing mechanical, plumbing and electrical system. In addition, Dimeo created a new basement level within the courtyard. This involved close coordination as the site is extremely tight and the surrounding buildings are historic. The new basement holds a black box theater and mechanical and electrical space. The architect for this project was Goody, Clancy & Associates.
